Why, then, should coughing be considered in a different light Physiologically and physically, they originate in the same way, and they are produced by the same healthy factors. Coughing is an exaggerated form of breathing, as crying is. Itching may be a normal or abnormal sensation or symptom. And so with tickling. Acute or temporary blushing is considered normal, whereas erythema or reddened skin is spoken of as an inflammation. It is evident, therefore, that the physical or chemical basis of normal signs and abnormal symptoms is one, or that the same cell-constituents which produce the one also occasion the other. Therefore, fever, pain, redness or inflammation and so forth, as used in naming diseases, turn out to be phenomena which are indicative of the fact that diseases have no own or individual factor-entities apart from those which sustain cell-function or livingness in general and in particular. Therefore functions and symptoms and diseases are dependent on the same cell-constituents, have the same unit physical or chemical basis. It is then evident that symptoms or diseases are but conditions evolved by normal factors of health behaving with unusual activity or accumulating in the system beyond their normal quotient. Accordingly, the more physicians treat symptoms or diseases as such, the more they diverge from the true Treatment of Disease. There must ever be a change and an exchange in every process, as there is an action and a reaction in every motion. As there is...
